

Moses is born when the Pharaoh is killing baby Hebrews, so that the slaves cannot rebel. Moses' mother puts him in a basket of reeds, and sends him down the Nile.

The Pharaoh's daughter finds Moses, and adopts him as her son. Moses then grows up in the palace.

Moses gets angry at an Egyptian guard, who killed a Hebrew slave; so Moses kills the guard, and then runs off because the Pharaoh wants him dead.

Because of the fact that the Pharaoh wants him dead, Moses becomes a shepherd.

When Moses is a shepherd, he sees a burning bush, and it is god, who tells him to go to the Pharaoh and tell him to let his slaves go.

The Pharaoh tells Moses that he won't let the slaves go, so Moses – in allegiance with God – sends the 10 plagues.

After the 10th plague the Pharaoh sets the slaves free, and Moses starts to lead them to the Promised Land.

When they reach the Red Sea, they can see the Pharaoh's army coming towards them, so Moses parts the sea, and then brings it down on the army.

The way in which God wants people to keep the covenant that he has made, is by them keeping to the 10 commandments, that he gives Moses.

They spend 40 years in the desert, and eventually reach the Promised Land.